

Dr. Adam Usadi, (LinkedIn)
Energy Center Advisor
ExxonMobil R&D

Adam is progressing a portfolio of R&D focused on low emissions energy and products at the Singapore Energy Centre, jointly founded by NTU and NUS. Before that he served in various roles in ExxonMobil R&D including R&D Planning Manager, section head of the Emerging Energy Sciences and Complex Systems Science sections and as a research engineer at ExxonMobil's Upstream Research Company.

Adam received his BS in Physics from Dartmouth College, MS in Materials Science from Hiroshima University, and PhD in Space Physics from Rice University. He also worked at Goldman Sachs where he supported precious metals trading.